Blessed are the peacemakers!

Change abounds at Goshen College! It is visible not only in the colorful foliage that brightens our campus in the fall, but also as we have welcomed our largest incoming class since 2009, one that represents our increasing diversity and celebrates the welcoming nature of our community. A transition in leadership has occurred over the past few months as we bid farewell to President Jim Brenneman '77 in July and welcome President Rebecca Stoltzfus '83 in November. I have been honored to serve as interim president these past four months and to be part of facilitating positive change in a time of transition.

But, not everything is changing here, as we focus on our core value of "compassionate peacemaking" this year. A scan of the national and global news on any given day can illustrate where peace is missing, but this is not the case at our beloved institution. Goshen College is truly a place to learn about and to practice peace. This is not because we are perfect at it by any means, but this is a place where we continue the hard and intentional work of being compassionate peacemakers in the radical model Jesus provided us in his life.

As someone who grew up outside of the Mennonite faith, though with a Catholic appreciation for peacemaking, and as a relative newcomer to this "spot in Indiana," I have been struck over and over again by how peace weaves through every aspect of life here. Our commitment to peacemaking is deeply embedded in our motto, in our core values, in our academic programs, in our clubs, in our study abroad program, in how we understand our identity and in our calling. It is not just in thought, but, perhaps more importantly, in action in how we demonstrate our commitment to peacemaking.

I am inspired by the diverse peacebuilding accomplishments and courage demonstrated by members of the GC community including: from current molecular biology/biochemistry major Yazan Meqbil '19 who spoke on Capitol Hill this summer to U.S. lawmakers about being a Palestinian child growing up in the midst of conflict, to the recipients of our 2017 Alumni Awards (read more about them on p. 14). These individuals represent a small sample of the outstanding ways we are seeking peace in our world. Goshen's impact on peace in the world is real and significant.

As we recall the words Jesus taught us in the Sermon the Mount, "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God" (Matthew 5:9), I invite you to think about how you will be a compassionate peacemaker this year and to share your ideas with us and your friends. If you are sharing this on social media, use the hashtag #compassionatepeacemaker to help us all connect with each other, to provide a platform to learn from one another and to demonstrate to others how actions large and small can make a difference.

"Blessed are the peacemakers..."

About the cover

After Eugene Stutzman '73 graduated from Goshen with a degree in art, he went on to become a major fashion designer in Sarasota, Florida. Along with his partner Alex, they created the acclaimed fashion label Eugene Alexander in the 1980s. This white gown of theirs may be their most iconic — worn by singer Whitney Houston for Time magazine in 1986, and appearing on the cover of Life magazine following her death in 2012. It was also worn by actress Sarah Jessica Parker in the opening scene of the movie, Sex and the City.

Dr. Rebecca Stoltzfus '83 and Kevin Miller '85

Dr. Rebecca Stoltzfus appointed 18th president

Dr. Rebecca Stoltzfus '83 was jointly appointed as Goshen College's 18th president by a unanimous vote from both the college's board of directors and the board of the Mennonite Education Agency. She officially takes office on November 1, 2017 and her inauguration will be February 17, 2018.

Stoltzfus previously served as vice provost for undergraduate education and as professor of human nutrition at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, where she collaborated to create Cornell's Global Health Program, which offers community-engaged learning opportunities for undergraduate students working on global health issues with partners in Tanzania, Zambia, the Dominican Republic and in two sites in India. Stoltzfus' research focuses on the causes and consequences of malnutrition in women and children in low-income countries, especially the integration of direct nutrition interventions with intersectoral strategies such as infectious disease control, food safety and reproductive health. She has over 150 peer-reviewed scientific publications, with collaborative research projects ongoing in Zimbabwe, Tanzania and India.

As vice provost for undergraduate education, Stoltzfus oversaw initiatives designed to enhance undergraduate instruction and to promote an intellectual community in and out of the classroom and the laboratory, including learning experiences in student residences.

On May 24, Stoltzfus was announced as the candidate of choice by the Presidential Search Committee and visited campus June 14-15 to meet with members of the campus community, who provided overwhelmingly strong support and affirmation for her to the committee.

Stoltzfus is married to Kevin Miller '85 and they are parents of Lydia Miller '18, who is majoring in mathematics, and Gabe Miller '20, who is majoring in environmental science. Her parents are alums Victor '56 and Marie Stoltzfus '56 of Goshen, and her father was president of Goshen College from 1984 to 1996.

GC, EMU partner to offer online Doctor of Nursing Practice

Goshen College and Eastern Mennonite University (Harrisonburg, Virginia) have partnered to offer the first doctoral degree program among the five Mennonite Church USA colleges and universities.

With classes beginning in January 2018, the online Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) program is currently seeking applications. Students will complete 10 online courses and at least one residency during the 22-month program, and will earn their degree from either institution that they choose. Eligible applicants must hold a Master of Science in Nursing degree from a CCNE- or NLNAC-accredited school with a cumulative GPA of 3.3 or higher.

"The launch of our first doctoral program is a significant historical development for both EMU and Goshen College," EMU Provost Fred Kniss said. "The new program aligns closely with each of our institutional missions and grows out of our special curricular strengths. It is one more sign of the academic quality and value of Mennonite higher education."

Twelve students participate in summer Inquiry Programs

Every summer, students have the opportunity to serve at a camp, in a congregation or with a service agency across the country or abroad as a part of the Camping, Ministry and Service Inquiry Programs. This year, 12 students (in order below, top to bottom, left to right) had the chance to explore the intersection of faith and vocation through active participation, observation of others and intentional reflection, all while building leadership skills.

Camping Inquiry Program

Rae Ann Miller, a junior mathematics major from Elkhart, Indiana, served at Camp Friedenswald in Michigan.

Andrew Nussbaum, a junior TESOL major from Galena, Ohio, served at Camp Friedenswald in Michigan.

Taylor Zehr, a senior elementary education major from Wauseon, Ohio, served at Little Eden Camp in Michigan.

Ministry Inquiry Program

Danny Aramouni, a junior double majoring in molecular biology/biochemistry and Bible and religion from Manhattan, Kansas, served at Reba Place Church in Illinois.

Emily Stoltzfus, a junior social work major from Goshen, Indiana, served at Madison Mennonite Church in Wisconsin.

Service Inquiry Program

Sara Azzuni, a junior nursing major from Dubai, served with the United Muslim Relief in Jordan.

Simelwe Dlova, a senior informatics major from South Africa, served with ITS Media at Goshen College.

Hannah Friesen, a junior psychology major from Fresno, California, served with Central California Mennonite Residential Services (CCMRs) in California.

Jose Ortiz, a senior molecular biology/biochemistry major from Goshen, Indiana, served with Oaklawn Psychiatric Center in Indiana.

Jill Steinmetz, a senior art major from Bluffton, Ohio, served with Mennonite Central Committee East Coast in Pennsylvania.

Maple Scholars explore wide range of topics in summer research projects

Sixteen Goshen College students participated in the Maple Scholars research program this summer, an eight-week, hands-on interdisciplinary summer research program that encourages applicants from every discipline to participate.

Reuben Leatherman, a senior physics and music double major from Portland, Oregon, and Spencer Aeschliman, a junior physics major from Salem, Oregon, worked with Professor of Physics John Ross Buschert '80 on recording and understanding air quality data from Elkhart County.

Kenan Bitikofer, a senior computer science and music double major from Saint George, Kansas, and Christian Bechler, a junior mathematics and history double major from Hudsonville, Michigan, worked with Professor of Mathematics David Housman, researching a bounded algorithm for discrete, complete and envy-free resource allocation.

Marris Opsahl, a sophomore writing and social work double major from Clarksville, Ohio, and Jose Chiquito Galvan, a sophomore sociology and sustainability studies double major from Goshen, worked with Professor of English Ann Hostetler on the GC Latinx Legacy Program, collecting stories and experiences of Center for Intercultural and International Education (CIIE, formerly CITL) scholarship recipients and GC graduates.

Joelle Friesen '17, worked with Bob Yoder, campus pastor, to preserve the legacy of Goshen College's Ministry, Service and Camping Inquiry programs through interviews.

Takoda Friesen, a senior film production major from Goshen, worked with FiveCore Media Manager and Assistant Professor of Communication Kyle Hufford, creating a documentary about the Plaut family, who live in Goshen, to tell their stories of providing a safe haven for Jewish families fleeing Germany in the early 1940s.

Joel Gerig, a senior molecular biology major from Goshen, worked in collaboration with former Associate Professor of Biology Kris Schmidt to use new techniques to edit a specific genome.

Maddie Gerig '17, worked with Associate Professor of Art John Mishler '72 to develop a series of processes and process descriptions that will enhance her own technique as a sculptor.

Julian Harnish, a senior music and mathematics double major from Bluffton, Ohio, worked with Vince Kurtz '17, worked with Professor of Physics Paul Meyer Reimer '83 on mapping worldwide changes in groundwater.

Isaac Longenecker, a junior accounting major from Grayslake, Illinois, worked in collaboration with Justin Heinzekehr '06, director for institutional research, to evaluate the college's current scientific data management practices, organize past data and develop standards for future students and Maple Scholars participants.

Jenae Longenecker, a senior history and peace, justice and conflict studies double major from South Bend, Indiana, worked in collaboration with Professor of English Ann Hostetler to establish a publishing imprint called Painted Glass Press.

Apa Naik, a senior biology major from Rasoda, India, worked with Michael Sherer '82, director of information technology, to explore existing and emerging research about the bio-chemical mechanisms of redox imbalance and associated disease progression.

Bridgette Webb, a junior environmental science major from Goshen, worked with Associate Professor of Biology Andrew Ammons to research the role of mosquitoes in the spread of viruses and diseases.

GC wins national marketing-recruitment excellence award

Goshen College is one of three institutions nationally that received a national Marketing-Recruitment Excellence Award from the higher education consulting company Ruffalo Noel Levitz (RNL) at their national conference in Denver, Colorado, July 26-28 (photo above).

The college turned around more than five years of declining enrollment by developing long-term strategies for recruitment, financial aid strategy, search and strategic enrollment planning. It has seen a 34 percent increase in enrollment since 2014, a 38 percent increase in net tuition revenue over two years and a major boost in diversity.

"Colleges and universities throughout the country are under increasing pressure to successfully shape their student enrollment and manage their fiscal health," said Sarah Coen, senior vice president, Ruffalo Noel Levitz. "These institutions have used leading strategies and enrollment management resources to identify, engage, and enroll their incoming classes."

GC named Indiana's first 'Bee Campus USA'

Goshen College has been named Indiana's first Bee Campus USA and is just the second college in the Midwest and 27th nationally to be recognized for its work in supporting pollinators such as bees.

The Bee Campus USA title recognizes colleges and universities that commit to a set of practices that support pollinators, including bees, butterflies, birds, bats and thousands of other species.

With 12 acres of restored prairie making up 20 percent of campus lawn and managed without the use of irrigation, pesticides or herbicides, the college provides a rich habitat with nectar and pollen for honeybees and other pollinators. The college is also home to several beehives on campus and at its Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center.

New Aschliman Peace Arts Collection honors the work of Kathryn Aschliman '54

During Homecoming Weekend, the Aschliman Peace Arts Collection was dedicated in honor of Goshen College Professor Emerita of Education Dr. Kathryn Aschliman '54 (above, center). The Aschliman Peace Arts Collection, located in the basement of the Good Library, is committed to building peace through Children's literature and the arts.

Aschliman taught more than 700 kindergarten students in the college's laboratory kindergarten from 1962 until her retirement in 1996. Her book "Growing Toward Peace" (Herald Press, 1993) collected stories from teachers and parents about real children learning to live peacefully.

The Aschliman Peace Arts Collection provides books, artwork, plays and theater props, curriculum, and music appropriate to children ages 4-14 and their teachers with a focus on peace and social justice issues.

SCOREBOARD SPRING 2017

BASEBALL (26-31-1, 11-16 CL)

Coach Alex Childers '09 led his team to within one game of qualifying for the NAIA tournament's opening round while posting the second-most wins in a season in school history and breaking several records in the process. The team won a program-record 12 games in a row from Feb. 27 to March 21 and picked up their 700th win in 61 seasons. En masse, the team set program records in hits, runs, doubles, runs batted in, walks and saves. Sophomore catcher Clinton Stroble II (Newport News, Virginia) was the first Maple Leaf to win first-team all-conference honors since 2005, while pitcher Michael Walker '17 (Archbold, Indiana) and center fielder Preston Carr '17 (Saint Thomas, Ontario) received honorable mention. Junior first baseman Brad Stoltzfus (Goshen), pitcher Blake Collins '17 (Ludington, Michigan) and freshman outfielder Quinlan Armstrong (Kokomo, Indiana) won conference Gold Glove awards.

MEN'S OUTDOOR TRACK AND FIELD (7TH IN CROSSROADS LEAGUE)

Goshen posted its best conference finish since 2014 and nearly doubled its point total at the conference meet. During the regular season, Ryan Smith '17 (Millersburg, Indiana) set new program records in both the 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs. Freshman Lindon McDonald (Topeka, Indiana) and Smith each earned all-conference honors. A trio of athletes qualified for the national meet: Smith and senior Isaiah Friesen (Filly, Nebraska) went in the marathon while Sawyer Biddle (White Heath, Illinois) met the national standard in the 5,000-meter race walk. Friesen finished 15th in a field of 77 runners in two hours, 53 minutes, 39.5 seconds. After challenging for the lead early, Smith withdrew due to medical concerns during the race. Numerically, Biddle posted Goshen's best national finish with an 11th-place mark. Goshen finished in a tie for 70th.

Freshman Spenser Triplett (Providence, Utah)

SOFTBALL (10-27, 7-24 CL)

Coach Kristen Kolter's team turned in the program's best win total since 2014 and had its winningest conference season since 2003. Junior pitcher Alexis Carpenter (Central Lake, Michigan) was honorable-mention all-conference after posting a team-high seven wins and 52 strikeouts. At the plate, second baseman Krista Sutliff '17 (Agua Dulce, California) drew her 51st career walk to set a new program record. Freshman first baseman Sandra Rodriguez (Palmdale, California) batted a team-high .301 with 11 runs scored while junior Candace Sutter (North Branch, Michigan) had a team-high 36 hits; sophomore catcher Sydney Stein (Clayton, Indiana) led all players with four home runs.

WOMEN'S OUTDOOR TRACK AND FIELD (10TH IN CROSSROADS LEAGUE)

Buoyed by a fourth-place finish from sophomore Donnae Lipinski (Westville, Indiana) in the shot put, who turned in a career-best mark that left her one spot shy of all-conference honors, Goshen's 2017 team outscored the 2016 edition by 15 points in the Crossroads League meet on May 5 and 6. Freshmen Chelsea Foster (McCordsville, Indiana) and Nora Rangel (Goshen) each contributed to the team score, which the Maple Leafs augmented with top-seven finishes in all three relays. Freshman Siana Emery (North Yarmouth, Maine) finished 11th in the 5,000-meter race walk at the NAIA national meet.

Junior Jill Steinmetz (Bluffton, Ohio)

MAPLE LEAF MEN'S VOLLEYBALL DEBUTS

Fifteen months before the program officially takes flight, Goshen College showed off its men's volleyball program to the public for the first time during Homecoming Weekend in front of a full house in Gunden Gymnasium. The Maple Leafs played Lawrence Technological University in a timed scrimmage (pictured above), winning two regulation sets and a shortened third before the 45-minute clock expired. GC used every player at its disposal for at least two rotations: the nine Maple Leafs in uniform included four freshmen and three players with previous varsity experience in other sports. As the program builds its roster, the team is playing its 2017-18 season as a club team before achieving varsity status next season.

The Maple Leafs' varsity program will be the fifth men's college team in Indiana but just the second below the NCAA Division I level. More than 70 Hoosier high schools sponsor the sport, whose participation numbers at the high-school level have quadrupled in the last 10 years. Three of the top seven states for high-school boys volleyball participation border Indiana, while two more represent regions from which GC has historically enrolled many students.

The Maple Leafs are slated to play the bulk of their 2018 club season in the spring: the NAIA season runs from January to early April with GC's slate expected to cluster in the second half of that window. Goshen's first season as a varsity program will be played in 2019 and the team is coached by Jim Daugherty.

NAIA RECOGNIZED 44 SCHOLAR-ATHLETES FOR 2016-17

During the 2016-17 school year, 25 fall student-athletes, five basketball student-athletes and 14 spring student-athletes were recognized as Daktronics-NAIA Scholar-Athletes, for a total of 44. This year's total represents more than one out of every five athletes on a Maple Leaf varsity roster: among athletes who have progressed far enough in their academic career to qualify, almost 45 percent were scholar-athletes.

TEN TEAMS NAMED SCHOLAR-TEAMS FOR 2016-17

Ten Goshen College athletic teams received NAIA Scholar-Team awards for maintaining a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 or higher in the 2016-17 academic year. The Maple Leafs were paced by their men's tennis team, which turned in a 3.67 GPA, the highest mark of any of the 104 NAIA men's tennis programs. Six of Goshen's seven fall teams were named NAIA Scholar-Teams, as were three of the four programs that compete in the spring.

Sheri (Greaser) Hartzler '73

Harrisonburg, Virginia | elementary education major

Sheri (Greaser) Hartzler '73 has led a life in service of others since graduating from Goshen College with a degree in elementary education.

"My parents modeled a life of serving others," she said, "and because of my educational experiences at Goshen College, especially Study-Service Term, I was equipped to carry on that tradition."

Hartzler spent 22 years working for Mennonite Media (now MennoMedia) and 16 years representing the Anabaptist comedy duo, Ted & Lee (now Ted & Co. Theaterworks). Hartzler also helped start Patchwork Pantry, a food distribution program in Harrisonburg, Virginia, after she, her husband, Jay '73, and two sons, Nathan and Philip, did a year of Mennonite Voluntary Service in Evansville, Indiana.

"Directing Patchwork Pantry for 20 years helped me stay in touch with the poor in my community and a large group of volunteers from local churches and universities," she said. "But my paying jobs were also ones in which I felt like I was able to contribute in a small way to making a difference in our world, whether through the gift of laughter and biblical story, through helping to produce documentaries and websites on social justice issues, or more recently through work with a local literacy agency."

After retiring in 2013, the Hartzlers spent a year serving in Romania with the Nazarene Missions Corp. Since then, they have spent the majority of each year in Romania as Nazarene volunteers.

In Romania, Hartzler is involved with Veritas, a Christian ecumenical organization that supports the community of Sighisoara through service, education and intercultural exchange. The agency provides programs for children, adults with special needs, elderly and teens and a counseling center for those impacted by domestic violence. At Veritas, she coordinates fundraising projects, is a member of the board of directors and provides support for the executive director.

But her work with Veritas goes beyond that. Hartzler is willing to do whatever needs to be done, like spending hours sorting through donated clothes and other supplies or leading music with several of the Veritas clubs.

She also spends two afternoons each week working with children in a nearby village, Tigmandru, where she leads music and different activities, like crafts.

"The 20 to 60 children (ages 3-12) who attend the kids' club," she said, "take me right back to my education classes at GC as I use many of the tools I learned there in my work with these Roma children."

She and Jay attend Community Mennonite Church in Harrisonburg.

Philip Thomas '87

Goshen | Bible and religion major

With more than 25 years of experience in conflict prevention, transformation and peacebuilding, Philip Thomas '87 has dedicated his life to helping facilitate peace and reconciliation.

Thomas, of Goshen, has traveled to more than 30 countries around the world in his work with heads of states, indigenous groups, community leaders and corporate executives, trying to encourage dialogue and implement peace. He has worked with organizations at all levels, from local to international.

"So much of my work involves me working with others, listening and understanding others deeply, recognizing and supporting them in the very difficult and complex environments they must navigate, and celebrating their efforts," he said. "And so having others recognize me and celebrate my work and effort is truly humbling and overwhelming."

His most recent work has been in Afghanistan, where he has supported the United Nations Assistance Mission (UNAMA), and in Somalia, where he offers support to the country's top governmental leadership, including the president and prime minister. Thomas has worked with the U.S. State Department African and Middle East Desk of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement.

Since 2005, Thomas has been working with various U.N. agencies as a senior consultant, while also supporting different international organizations. In 2007, he co-authored "Democratic Dialogue: A Handbook for Practitioners" with Bettye Pruitt, a project that was released jointly by the U.N. Development Programme, the Organization of American States, the Canadian International Development Agency and International IDEA.

Thomas founded D3 Associates, a consulting firm aimed at creating change in organizations, teams and communities through collaborative action. In addition to consulting, D3 Associates provides training programs, facilitation and other tools for those in dialogue. Thomas also teaches an occasional peace, justice and conflict studies course as an adjunct professor at Goshen College.

Thomas and his wife, Ana, attend Walnut Hill Mennonite Church in Goshen. They have two daughters, Alicia and Sofia.

Nicole Bauman '08

Elkhart, Indiana | Bible and religion major

Nine years after graduating from Goshen College, Nicole Bauman's '08 life path can be hard to name or identify as a specific "job" or "career."

Bauman's calling is a combination of working for sustainability, healing, community and justice.

A few years ago, Bauman and her partner, Jason Shenk, began the Prairie Wolf Collective, a housing co-op in the city of Elkhart, Indiana, where they live in land-based community with others. Bauman also started Red Oak Farm, a micro urban permaculture Community Supported Agriculture project, in order to address the lack of access to fresh produce in her neighborhood.

"So much of my learning at GC [was] around the interconnected nature of all things, all struggles for justice, our own inner work and in building the world we long to live in," she said. "My life reflects this, as it weaves together many different areas of justice, healing and living into this new sort of resilient world we imagine, even as we struggle within the shell of the old."

Bauman is also invested in promoting healing. She is a yoga teacher in the Elkhart area and practices reiki, a healing technique that uses touch to produce positive energy in a person's body. Bauman also practices as a doula, a birth companion who provides physical and emotional support.

Beyond all of that, Bauman is active in working for justice in her community. Her biggest passions are fighting lead contamination in water, protecting water rights and standing alongside undocumented people. She also studies and practices Nonviolent Communication.

"Nicole has chosen and grown a life centered on caring for the earth and those around her," said classmate Greta Weaver '08. "She intentionally engages marginalized groups and individuals in her community to understand, walk with, and advocate for and with them."

Bauman and Shenk attend the Elkhart Quaker Worship group, and they recently welcomed their first child.

Stan King '61

Goshen | biology major

Stan King's '61 30-year research career in plant pathology was bookended by successful stints with the Goshen College tennis team, first as a nearly undefeated player, then as one of the longest-serving coaches in Maple Leaf history.

King was born in India to missionary parents. That's where, as a boarding school student in South India, he took up tennis as an 8-year-old, earlier than most of his peers in the United States. When his family moved to Goshen, he attended Goshen High School where playing tennis (GHS) helped him transition.

"Tennis was something I excelled at," said King. "It gave me some self-esteem and self-confidence, which was especially important for a 14-year-old moving into a new country and culture."

As a student-athlete at GC, King lost only two tennis singles matches in four years playing no. 1 singles and doubles.

His first season as a Maple Leaf coincided with the debut season of intercollegiate tennis at GC in the fall of 1957, coached by none other than Roman Gingerich '41 himself, a man King admires for his yeoman efforts to bring intercollegiate athletics to GC.

"I am grateful for my GC experience — it was positive and a good one," said King. "It gave me a strong foundation and direction for my life. Turning down a tennis scholarship at Western Michigan University in favor of GC was, in retrospect, a crucial decision for me."

King continued his formal education at The Ohio State University, receiving his master's and doctoral degrees in plant pathology. His 30-year research career had him teamed with scientists engaged in regional projects to improve crops, primarily coarse grained cereals (pearl millet, sorghum, corn) in semi-arid areas of Africa and Asia.

One of his more significant research achievements was identification in West Africa of stable sources of resistance to downy mildew disease in pearl millet which were later used by him and other scientists to develop breeding materials to combat downy mildew disease epidemics in India. One composite variety developed from this work added over $50 million annually to the income of pearl millet farmers in India during the late 1980s.

After returning to the U.S. in 1997 and retiring as a plant pathologist, King started a "retirement career" coaching tennis, first as girls' team coach at GHS (8 spring seasons) and then adding the men's team at GC (fall sport) in 1999. After 17 years with GC tennis, King retired with a 106-103 record, a program high for wins by a coach.

King and his wife, Bonnie '65, have two married sons, Matthew '92 and David '00 (a player on King's first GC team), and three grandchildren. They attend College Mennonite Church, Goshen.

Justine (Clemmer) Pletcher '72

Goshen | elementary education major

During her four years as a Maple Leaf, Justine (Clemmer) Pletcher '72 played at center forward for the varsity field hockey team.

"Hockey was a huge part of my love of college," she said. "I found wonderful friends, enjoyed the release from academic pressure and simply had fun! I do not remember scores or records, but I do remember the camaraderie and sharing with my coaches and teammates."

Field hockey, a sport popular in the East, lasted for nearly 30 years at GC, but a lack of interest in the Midwest and the rise of women's soccer made it increasingly difficult to find competition close by. In the final season, 1990, the team only played five schools from Indiana.

As a student-athlete, Pletcher had a number of different role models, especially Dr. Ruth Gunden '52 and Berdene Wyse, her hockey coach, both of whom "exemplified Goshen's motto of 'Culture for Service'" and impacted her life.

When Pletcher graduated from GC with a degree in elementary education, she started teaching at New Paris Elementary in New Paris, Indiana, where her classroom guidelines were simple: "Treat Others Right and Do the Right Thing."

Pletcher also continued to stay involved with the GC field hockey program. She officiated a number of home games and even served as interim coach of the team for a year in 1980.

After a few years, Pletcher and her husband, Ken '70, began to start a family, and she enjoyed staying at home with their two sons, Nate '00 and Todd '05, for 10 years.

Once the boys were older, Pletcher returned to teaching, this time at Middlebury Elementary School, a part of the Middlebury Community School system where Ken spent a number of years as a basketball coach, teacher, and eventually, athletic director.

But over the years, Pletcher has remained involved with Maple Leaf athletics, as Ken also taught, coached and served as the athletic director at the college for a number of years, and both of their sons played soccer during their time as students at GC.

The Pletchers have also been loyal members and financial supporters ever since the start of the Maple Leaf Athletic Club, the official support group of GC athletics.

In 2008, Pletcher retired from teaching after 26 total years. Since then, she's volunteered in school programs, supervised GC student teachers and participated in children's education activities at church.

Traveling has become Pletcher's first priority in retirement, especially to visit her children and new grandson in California and Australia. The Pletchers attend College Mennonite Church in Goshen.

From Sept. 18-24, the local Goshen community held its first "Fashion Week," with the capstone event being a benefit fashion show featuring Eugene Alexander couture to raise money to renovate the Goshen Theater. And then, an exhibit featuring a selection of dresses from the Eugene Alexander collection was held in Goshen College's Hershberger Art Gallery from Sept. 24 to Nov. 13, with a reception during Homecoming Weekend. Thankfully, as the designer and co-founder of the fashion line, Eugene Stutzman '73 was able to return to campus for both of these wonderful events.

His unique story has inspired a number of other Goshen College alumni to get involved. Having known Stutzman from going to Covenant Mennonite Church together in Sarasota, Florida, Susan (Martin) Kauffman '84 created the Eugene Alexander Hope Foundation and is now its president and collection curator. She has worked tirelessly to find and purchase more than 400 Eugene Alexander dresses after the business had gone bankrupt and there was no inventory remaining. "Here we have a collection of art and it deserves to be preserved," Kauffman said. "I want it to continue to be generative and bring good." The foundation uses the dresses to raise funds, through fashion shows, for the social justice causes to which Eugene and Alex were so dedicated.

And it was at one such show a few years ago in Sarasota that Rachel Smucker '15, then a college student and fashion lover, met Eugene and was inspired by him and his story. She brought her enthusiasm for fashion and Goshen College together by being the event producer for Goshen's first "Fashion Week." That event featured a documentary video produced by Jake Smucker '15 and was underwritten by Jim Miller '93.

In 1981, Eugene Stutzman '73 and his husband, Alexander Wallace, put their first names together and created what became an iconic 1980s fashion label. Nearly broke, Alex went to New York City with 10 ornamented dinner jackets Eugene had handmade and a list of Seventh Avenue reps who might carry the new label. After many rejections, agent Rod Owens agreed to take the line on a trial basis. Alex surreptitiously draped the Waterlily Jacket on a display that looked out on the elevator lobby. And in a classic serendipitous occurrence, the buyer for Saks Fifth Avenue saw the jacket as the elevator doors opened. It was not her intended floor, but she got off the elevator and told a flabbergasted Rod Owens she wanted this jacket for all her stores, a holiday catalog, a New York Times ad and Rockefeller Square windows.

Eugene expected to have small orders from small boutiques. A huge department store order of $50,000 came as a shock. Eugene was able to secure a loan with his father's co-signature. Eugene recalls, "Being a good Mennonite, it didn't occur to me to entrust the making of these beautiful jackets to a garment factory. We do our own work. Alex and I rented a workshop, hired about eight women and started to make the Saks order. We had three months!"

That first season, Eugene Alexander jackets were purchased by nearly every major department store in the country, including Neiman-Marcus, Bloomingdales, Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord and Taylor, Marshall Field's, Garfinckle's, Lazarus, Filene's and Nordstrom.

They expanded the line to include ball gowns and within two years, became a major resource in the special occasion market. Costumers from Hollywood trekked to the Eugene Alexander showroom at 498 Seventh Avenue in New York. Eugene Alexander's cinematic style perfectly suited iconic 80s shows such as Dynasty, Dallas and Knots Landing. The line was also selected to represent fragrance launches, most notably, Elizabeth Taylor's Passion. Their Sarasota, Florida workshop was 12,000 square feet and employed 30.

By the early 1990s, competitors started knocking-off the Eugene Alexander look with cheap, off-shore labor. The regional department stores, Eugene Alexander's best customers, were merging or going out of business. Eugene recalls, "The fun went out of the business. Computers replaced the smart buyers, stores demanded huge discounts, sales floors were staffed by inexperienced, minimum-wage clerks.” Eugene Alexander had been one of the first high-end evening wear lines to earn the coveted “Crafted with pride in the USA” label. By 1993, Eugene Alexander was one of the last remaining manufacturers who carried this label.

Eugene Alexander closed its doors in 1993. Eugene and Alex continued to work in design-related activities and the collection of antiques. When Alex passed away in 2005, he and Eugene had enjoyed 30 years together as soul mates and artistic collaborators.

A great tribute to the enduring quality of their work is the fact that many dresses still exist. Online auctions regularly sell Eugene Alexander gowns for more than their original retail prices. The gowns that helped to define the Epoch of the Woman live on to inspire and remind us of where we have been.

In his own words

“Mennonite fashion designer” is a distinction I embrace with pride, gratitude and a good dose of Anabaptist humility. The fashion designer’s job is to observe and reflect on the culture and the social, political and economic forces that are transforming that culture. These observations are viewed through a lens colored by the designer’s life journey. For me, this lens was in large part created by my time at Goshen College where the Anabaptist vision of serving in community and championing social justice was the cornerstone of an excellent liberal arts education.

Most of my work in fashion occurred during the 1980s, a time of great social change. As a gay Mennonite, my personal life lens was greatly affected by this social change. My partner, Alex, and I were happily accepted into the fashion industry but unhappily rejected by many factions of society, including the Mennonite Church. This acceptance and rejection made us empathize with the women’s movement and appreciate the impact fashion could have on that movement.

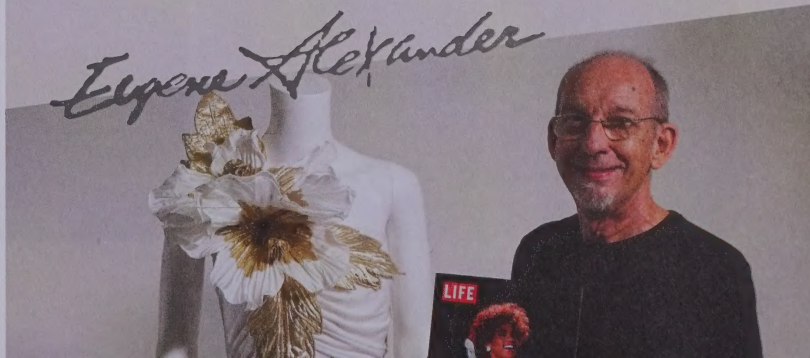

Special occasion dressing, the category in which most of my work fits, offered women the opportunity to make bold personal statements. Daytime business attire for women emulated boardroom menswear. Power suits with aggressive shoulder pads were de rigueur. But for special occasions (still described by the male moniker “Black Tie”), many women wanted more feminine attire while still presenting a strong, accomplished image. This was the niche into which my design aesthetic fit perfectly.

As a gender non-conforming child, my mother, wise beyond her era, patiently taught me to sew and encouraged my often eccentric and theatrical creations. Much of my fashion work was inspired by experimentation with three-dimensional fabric manipulation. My invention of pleating devices and other sewing jigs and techniques created the Eugene Alexander look. Large, three-dimensional flowers were a signature ornamental motif used throughout our collections spanning 14 years.

In viewing this exhibit, I also see the influence of the simple, often naive color combinations of Amish clothing and quilts I observed while growing up in Holmes County, Ohio. Startling colors paired with black show up season after season.

I was often asked where my line was manufactured. Unlike most of my competitors, I could proudly say that it was made entirely in my own factory in Sarasota, Florida, by fairly paid, satisfied workers. The Anabaptist lens through which I viewed my design career did not permit the unjust exploitation of labor. Thank you, Goshen College, for instilling in me and my generation of students the social justice sensibility that still informs our lives.

DAN KOOP LIECHTY '88
DIRECTOR OF ALUMNI AND CAREER NETWORKS

Building better alumni networks

Every day employers call or stop by our office to see if we can help them connect with our current students and alumni who might be looking for employment or internship opportunities. Academic departments are also being contacted more than ever. This isn't surprising since our county's unemployment rate is a near record low of less than 2 percent right now and billboards advertising job openings are everywhere.

With this in mind, we have been strategizing about how to best get these potential career opportunities out to our students and alumni. We do have an effective online job bank (goshen.edu/jobs), but we want to expand our ability to help our students and alumni network. Towards that goal, we are developing a new tool with the help of our campus IT staff that will help students and alumni connect.

The new online directory and community we are developing will be significantly more user-friendly and effective as a networking tool than our current online alumni directory, which has limited capability to allow for more granular networking opportunities. Alumni can choose to offer their services to students and other alumni in career advocacy, offering internship or job shadowing opportunities or even offer potential employment opportunities. In addition, the new program will enable students, alumni, faculty and staff to develop affinity groups that can serve as a platform for sharing professional advice and opportunities in a myriad of areas.

At this time, we are looking for alumni volunteers who would be interested in helping us pilot this new tool in the coming months. If this sounds like something you would be interested in participating in, please contact me directly at dankl@goshen.edu. We are looking forward to helping all our students and alumni connect in meaningful ways.

Ruth E. Krall '62 (faculty '65-68, '76-81, '84-04), Tucson, Ariz., and Lisa Schirch '90, Harrisonburg, Va., are co-authors of "Living on the Edge of the Edge: Letters to a Younger Colleague" (Friesen Press, 2017). In the book they disentangle and discuss two divisive issues that separate Christian from Christian in the current century: the church's management of clergy sexual abuses of children, teens and adults and sexual gender orientation and church membership. They discuss their personal and their professional opinions about ways in which religious and spiritual teaching communities can avoid the institutional perils of abusive clericalism and divisive denominational management practices. Throughout the book, they apply Anabaptist-Mennonite principles of peace-making in situations of sexual violation. Schirch is a research professor at Eastern Mennonite University's Center for Justice and Peacebuilding, as well as the North American research director for the Toda Institute for Global Peace and Policy Research, and a senior policy adviser with the Alliance for Peacebuilding. They were both instrumental in the development of the Anabaptist-Mennonite Chapter of SNAP (Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests). 1

Abigail Gascho Landis '99, a veterinary in Cobleskill, N.Y., is the author of “Immersion: The Science and Mystery of Freshwater Mussels” (Island Press, April 2017), which Harvard University scientist E.O. Wilson described as, “nature writing at its best.” In the book, Landis brings readers to a hotbed of mussel diversity, the American Southeast, to seek mussels where they eat, procreate, and, too often, perish. Accompanied often by her husband Andrew Gascho Landis '00, a mussel scientist, and her young children, she learned to see mussels on the creekbed, to tell a spectaclecase from a pigtoe, and to worry what vanishing mussels — 70 percent of North American species are imperiled — will mean for humans and wildlife alike. She shares this journey, traveling from perilous river surveys to dry streambeds and into laboratories where endangered mussels are raised one precious life at a time. The book was named to Food Tank's reading list “17 Reads for a Brighter Spring.” 14

Ways you can help grow Goshen

Referrals are one of our top sources for students who end up enrolling. Refer students to us who have not heard of or considered Goshen College, but whom you think would value this learning experience and community. (goshen.edu/refer)

Organize a group of high school students in your area and bring them to campus for a visit. The Admissions Office can help with your planning and with travel reimbursement. (goshen.edu/visit)

Pray regularly for our admission counselors on the road, prospective students traveling for a visit and for those making decisions at the college.

another GENERATION

Check out this list of 192 students (20% of the student body) studying at Goshen College in Fall 2017-18 who have one or two parents who are Goshen College alumni. We celebrate this passing on of "Culture for Service" from one generation to the next!

A gift from God

by JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

"Sewing was my gift from God." These were words Edna Shantz '48, a faculty member from 1950 to 1983, used to describe her lifelong fascination with clothing and textiles.

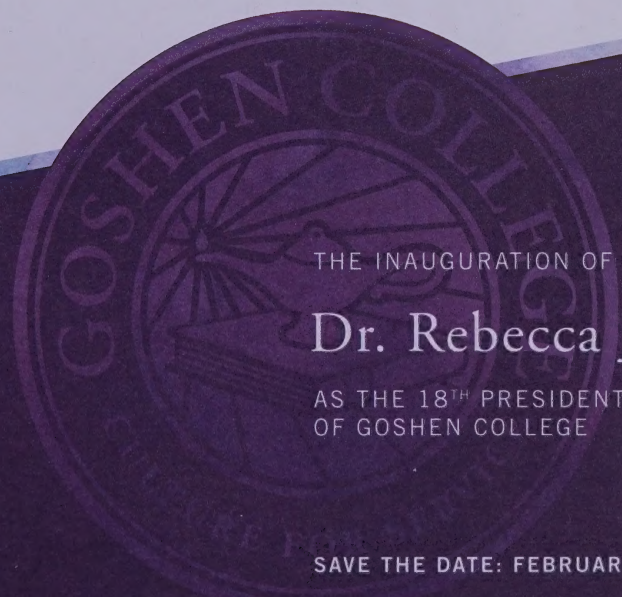

Not until she was in her 30s did Edna pursue academic training — moving quickly from the role of student to professor. Her master's project at Michigan State was an elegant deep red suit and demonstrated nimble technique learned from her rural Mennonite mother. Was its flair informed by what she observed while working as a maid in the upscale home of a top Dow Chemical executive?

She elicited both technique and flair from her students: semester-end fashion shows, experiential gracious living at "Home Management House," doll-size case studies in history of costume. In 1954 she introduced weaving to the college's curriculum. Based in the Art Department, this course expanded the range of students who could benefit from her fascination with materials, color and design.

OVERWHELMED WITH GRATITUDE

Read a final interview with President James E. Brenneman '77, who will step down at the end of June.

FORGING THEIR FUTURES

Meet 15 young alumni who are innovating, taking risks and building their own businesses from the ground up.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Thank the makers and Maker!

There is a scene in The Empire Strikes Back where the droid C-3PO is so relieved by the news that Hans Solo survives being frozen in carbonite that it exclaims, "Oh, thank the Maker!" Sometimes, even droids can't help but give thanks! Whether or not such an exclamation emerges out of complex organic or inorganic systems, in scripts or in an actual spiritual plane of existence, gratitude is a natural outburst of grateful beings, be we droid or human.

I have come to more fully realize during my presidential tenure that one of the greatest gifts a liberal arts education can give anyone — be it metaphorical, mechanistic, scientific, literary, literal, historical or spiritual — is an ever-deepening lifelong sense of gratefulness. Like C-3PO, I wish to express my deepest thanks to all the makers and the Maker of this wonderful, blessed institution called Goshen College.

I am most especially thankful for all those who have helped make Goshen College the intercultural campus it is becoming, whose soon to be majority of students of color will reflect the actual diversity of our neighborhoods, the Anabaptist world communion and, indeed, the biodiverse evolving earth as the Maker and Creator intended for it to be.

For me personally, and by extension for Goshen College as its 16th president, makers of the college's intercultural vision include the teachers and classmates of my first educational experience in the ethnically diverse Mennonite-related Sharon School in the heart of Ybor City, the Cuban-quarter of Tampa, Florida. A list of my makers would include the Alvarez, Canella, Dominguez, Esposito, Garcia, Horst, Lehman, Menendez, Sauder, Tuñon, Valido and Brenneman families of Ybor City Mennonite Church. In those crucial formative years, I never knew that church or school weren't meant to include all the varied people of the neighborhood, indeed, a profound witness in the midst of a still segregated South. Without these makers, my spiritual development may have been severely arrested, my image of the possibility of a truly intercultural Mennonite church, and its colleges and universities, stunted. To all of you, thanks.

Other makers include, of course, past and present GC board members, faculty, staff, administrators, students, donors, alumni, civic and community leaders and many others who fully bought into the vision of a transformed Goshen College. And to Dr. Terri, my spouse, and son Quinn, you are the best supporters of all. Thank you, all.

As I leave these years behind, I do so with greater hope than when I first addressed you as president-elect in November 2005. I said then: "The world needs Goshen College!" I still believe that proclamation more than ever! Today, however, I would simply add, "and Goshen College needs the world!" The making of a liberal arts college so great as this will always include "the world and all that dwells therein" whose makers and Maker are worthy of our deepest gratitude.

President receives distinguished national Hispanic higher ed leadership award

President Jim Brenneman '77 was selected to receive the Alfredo G. de los Santos, Jr. Distinguished Leadership in Higher Education Award, presented by the American Association of Hispanics in Higher Education (AAHHE) at the AAHHE 12th Annual Conference in Irvine, California.

This award is given to an outstanding administrator in the field of higher education who has demonstrated excellence in the profession.

"AAHHE is proud to recognize Dr. James E. Brenneman for his stellar leadership, strength, and sustained dedication to the Higher Education Community," Dr. Loui Olivas, AAHHE President.

"I am deeply honored and grateful to receive this award from AAHHE, especially as it is named for the preeminent scholar, leader, role model, advocate and trailblazer for Hispanics in higher education, Dr. Alfredo de los Santos, Jr.," Brenneman said. "To follow in his footsteps is a high calling, indeed, one which I have fully embraced as if the betterment of the whole world depended on it. Because it does."

Kiplinger's names GC to top 100 'Best College Values' among liberal arts colleges in U.S.

Goshen College has again been named one of the top 100 best college values among all liberal arts colleges by Kiplinger's Personal Finance for 2017. This year, Goshen College was ranked 85th among liberal arts colleges, placing it fourth among Indiana liberal arts colleges that combine outstanding quality with affordability.

Among all colleges and universities, GC ranked sixth in Indiana, higher than universities such as Butler University, Indiana University Bloomington and the University of Evansville.

Welcome Center named to honor first African-American graduate

On Feb. 10, Goshen College officially dedicated the Juanita Lark Welcome Center in honor of Juanita Jewell Lark, the college's first African-American graduate in 1943, following a special convocation about her life. While she died in 2008, nearly 20 members of Lark's family were in attendance for the dedication (above).

"It is a fitting tribute to the groundwork she set for the students who came after her and for those students still to come," said President Jim Brenneman '77. "Juanita led the way for a more multicultural campus, and it feels fitting for Juanita to be commemorated in the first building guests visit on campus."

Rocio Diaz, coordinator of intercultural community engagement, helped lead a workshop at the conference.

GC co-sponsors first Indiana Latino Higher Education Conference

Goshen College co-sponsored a conference titled "Shared Opportunity, Shared Success: Latinos, Higher Education, Indiana's Future," in conjunction with Independent Colleges of Indiana (ICI), and the University of Notre Dame on April 13, 2017.

President Jim Brenneman '77 spoke at the conference on the Notre Dame campus about "The Intercultural Transformation of a Midwest Mennonite College," outlining the changes that have taken place at Goshen College in the last decade, including increased Latino student attendance and positive town-gown relations.

"If such a transformation can happen in the land of Goshen, both in the college and in the community, then it can happen anywhere where people are willing to learn from each other, to listen to one another, to help each other make dreams of becoming a beloved community, a world house of learning, a reality," he said.

Richard Aguirre, director of corporate and foundation relations at Goshen College, proposed the idea for this conference to ICI last year.

"I believe Indiana's 31 independent colleges can and should follow Goshen College's excellent example because they are very well suited to serve Latino and other first-generation students," Aguirre said. "Indiana's independent colleges have a great track record of retaining and graduating minority students and with the equivalent debt level of public colleges."

History students record oral history of Minority Ministries Council

GC history students interviewed members of the Minority Ministries Council, who were in Goshen for a GC-sponsored conference titled "Black, Brown, and Mennonite: Lessons from the Chicano, Puerto Rican, and Black Freedom Movements for the Mennonite Church," from March 29 – April 1. The conversations were recorded and will be transcribed and held in the Mennonite Church USA Archives for future access by researchers. Overall, 18 separate oral histories were shared, totaling over 36 hours of stories.

Second annual fundraiser aids Latino student scholarships

On Feb. 2, Goshen College held the second annual Latino Scholarship Dinner to raise money to provide scholarships for Latino students (right). Hoping to build on the success of the first dinner, about 170 guests took part in the dinner, which raised about $100,000, double what was raised at the first Latino Scholarship Dinner.

In April 2016, Goshen College's Digital Eve group, led by Jeanette Shown, associate professor of computer science and information technology, and Meghan Gerke '18, received an $8,500 grant from Google's IgniteCS program, an initiative that supports student groups committed to developing and delivering a computer science outreach program in their community.

Since October, student mentors from Goshen College have been facilitating a once-a-week coding club of about 30 students at Goshen Middle School (GMS), teaching computer science and programming "from hardware up to software," Shown said.

Jeff Peachey '88 restores rare 1564 Ausbund for MHL

The Mennonite Historical Library (MHL) at Goshen College owns the world's only surviving copy of the first printing, in 1564, of songs that eventually became the Ausbund, one of the first Anabaptist songbooks and the Protestant hymnal in longest continuous use — by the Old Order Amish.

In 1928, H.S. Bender 1918, founder of the MHL and then-professor and later dean at GC, discovered this printing in a rare book store in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. It languished in the MHL in two pieces for nearly 90 years until 2015 when a library patron offered to pay for conserving and rejoining the two parts into a sturdy, single volume, or Sammelband, again. That work was done by Jeffrey Peachey '88, an expert bookbinder in New York City.

The rare book room of the MHL also contains a copy of an early edition of the Schleithelm Confession (1527), which is one of only two surviving copies of that edition in the world.

SCOREBOARD FALL/WINTER 2016-17

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY (5TH IN CL)

Senior Ryan Smith (Albion, Indiana) became the first male All-American in program history, finishing 22nd at the national meet on Nov. 19. Smith graduates with 15 of the 22 fastest times in school history and a record of 24:41.5. First-year Steven Cranston (Canby, Oregon), who also qualified for nationals, finished with a season best of 25:33.8, which is the fastest time in program history by a first-year student other than Smith. Both runners received all-conference honors.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY (8TH IN CL)

A pair of first-years, Chelsea Foster (McCordsville, Indiana) and Nora Rangel (Goshen), clocked in under 20 minutes for five kilometers at the conference meet on Nov. 5, marking the first time in at least five seasons that two Maple Leafs reached that milestone in the same race. Six of GC's eight runners at that meet were first-year students and five set personal-best times.

MEN'S TENNIS (4-10, 3-5 CL) WOMEN'S TENNIS (0-11, 0-8 CL)

Director of tennis Evan Atkinson assumed control of both the men's and women's programs after the retirement of men's head coach Stan King. Junior Aritha Weerasinghe (Sri Lanka) and sophomore Eric Zuercher (Switzerland) each picked up all-conference recognition for the men: Zuercher paced the team with 15 wins while Weerasinghe stepped into the no. 1 singles spot and finished with 10 wins. Senior Eric Cender (Valparaiso, Indiana) added 10 victories between no. 5 singles and no. 3 doubles. Senior Joelle Friesen (Normal, Illinois) led the women in wins.

MEN'S SOCCER (6-7-5, 4-3-2 CL)

The Maple Leafs were buoyed by a defense that held an opponent to one goal or less in 14 of 18 games, including six shutouts. The team finished the season with a 405-minute shutout streak, its longest since 1981, before Huntington University scored in sudden-death overtime to eliminate GC from the conference tournament. Sophomore goalkeeper Johan Escalante (Kissimmee, Florida) and sophomore defender Tevin Gilkes (Trinidad and Tobago) each earned all-conference recognition. First-year midfielder Ollie Smith (Great Britain) led the team with five goals and was one of four players with two assists.

WOMEN'S SOCCER (6-10-2, 2-5-2 CL)

Goshen started its conference season with a bang, scoring three goals in less than three minutes to turn a 2-0 deficit into a 3-2 win at Huntington on Sept. 24. Three days later, the team beat Bethel 2-1 in Mishawaka, starting their conference season 2-0 for the first time since 1997. The campaign would also finish on a high note, as the team reached the Crossroads League tournament quarterfinals for the first time since 2007. Junior defender Lena Charles (Danville, Indiana) was named honorable mention all-conference, while senior goalkeepers Molly Zook (Doylestown, Ohio) and Natalie Thorne (Goshen) each reached the top 10 in career saves.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL (13-19, 7-11 CL)

An up-and-down campaign included both a three-match winning streak and a four-match losing streak while finishing eighth in the conference. Senior Lexa Magnuson (Elkhart, Indiana) reached sixth on the all-time Maple Leaf list with 285 career blocks, while junior Lisa Rodriguez (Gas City, Indiana) is eighth with 1,569 assists. Head coach Jim Routhier coached his 900th career match — counting both college and high school — on Sept. 8 at Anderson. Magnuson, junior Christy Swartzendruber (Shickley, Nebraska), first-year Ally Roehr (Allendale, Michigan) and senior Kylie Giger (Elkhart, Indiana) were each named all-conference.

DAUGHERTY NAMED INAUGURAL MEN'S VOLLEYBALL COACH

Jim Daugherty (above) has been named head coach of the Maple Leaf men's volleyball program, slated to start play in 2018-19. The Plymouth, Indiana, native has over 30 years of coaching experience at the club, high school and college levels and has been an assistant for the GC women's volleyball team since 2014. Goshen will become the fifth school in Indiana, but just the second below NCAA Division I, to sponsor the sport. While the season will run from January to April, plans are underway for a demonstration match as part of Homecoming Weekend in October 2017.

MEN'S BASKETBALL (10-20, 3-15 CL)

Senior Xavier Newson (Peoria, Illinois) was an honorable-mention all-conference pick after transferring to Goshen before the season: he scored a team-high 15.6 points per game and was second on the team with 5.1 rebounds per game. Senior Kevin Phillips (South Holland, Illinois) led the team with 5.5 boards per game and he graduates having made 61.3 percent of his shots, the second-highest mark in school history. Junior point guard Devin Heath-Granger (Indianapolis, Indiana) finished 13th in the NAIA with 5.5 assists per game and enters his senior year with 385 dimes, 119 short of the school record.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL (13-18, 7-11 CL)

A year after reaching the semifinals of the NAIA national tournament and graduating four regulars, Goshen reached as high as third in the conference before saying goodbye to seven seniors. Senior Sophia Sears (Paoli, Indiana), who was an honorable-mention All-American after winning second-team honors in 2015-16, graduates with the 10th-most points in program history (1,199) while also finishing third in assists, second in three-point percentage and setting a new school record by making 84.3 percent of her free throws. Senior Lynnina Noel (Fort Wayne, Indiana), a third-team all-Crossroads League pick, finished with 1,159 points, while classmate Gabby Williams (Minooka, Illinois) came within 0.7 percentage points of a new field-goal percentage record.

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S INDOOR TRACK AND FIELD

Senior Ryan Smith (Albion, Indiana) earned All-American honors again, taking fifth place in the 3,000 meters at nationals on March 4. The Maple Leafs continued an 11-year streak of qualifying race walkers for every national championship, with junior Sawyer Biddle (White Heath, Illinois) and first-year Siana Emery (North Yarmouth, Maine) doing so this year. A men's 4x800-meter relay team also qualified, finishing 19th. During the season, the Maple Leafs broke three relay records, while junior Caitlin Hughey (Muskegon, Michigan), first-year Lindon McDonald (Shipshewana, Indiana) and Smith all added new individual marks. The Crossroads League does not officially recognize team champions in indoor competition, but the men finished seventh and the women eighth at a league-wide invitational on February 18 and 19.

TWENTY-NINE NAMED SCHOLAR-ATHLETES FOR FALL AND WINTER

The NAIA named 29 Goshen students Daktronics-NAIA Scholar-Athletes, an award reserved for juniors and seniors with grade-point averages above 3.50. The Maple Leaf women's soccer team led all Goshen programs and all NAIA women's soccer sides with 14 athletes recognized. The awards cover only soccer, volleyball, cross country and basketball; nominees in baseball, softball, tennis, and track and field are announced in the spring at those sports' national championships.

A final interview with President James E. Brenneman

BY JODI H. BEYELER '00

Overwhelmed with

On June 30, at the end of the 2016-17 academic year, Dr. James E. Brenneman '77 will step down from his role as the 16th president of Goshen College, concluding 11 ½ years of distinguished service to the college. In August he will begin as president of the American Baptist Seminary of the West in Berkeley, California.

Q: How has your faith been shaped during these years as president?

A: I have come to believe even more in the story of death and resurrection as expressed in the life and teaching of Jesus. I have seen this cycle played out again and again on grander scales as an institution, certainly, many times personally, emotionally and spiritually as I have tried my best with God's help to lead us through the Jesus story relived in our own experiences, institutionally and personally. I would say, in some ways, my faith is more resilient than ever, though I know the next death may come to test that confidence.

Q: What gave you the greatest joy as president, and what was the most difficult challenge?

A: My greatest joy and deepest source of awe has always come from, hands down, the students themselves. They are a source of inspiration, motivation, rejuvenation and joy for me. Every single year, their bright energies, their will to learn, their push-back, their challenges, their enthusiasms, their amazing talents simply blow my mind and expand my heart. They are the best evidence that GC is good at growing wisdom and wonder. To see our student-body grow into a soon to be majority student body of color and the added blessing that is for our entire campus has been among my greatest joys.

My most difficult challenge has been to steer the college through the biggest economic crash since the Great Depression. That, along with the tectonic and tumultuous shift in the business model of higher education that has been emerging over the last couple of decades, was an excruciating period to recover from. But I am very hopeful about the many new initiatives, programs, delivery systems, collaborations and the positive enrollment trajectory that we are now on. I truly believe there is no past-Goshen College greater than the Goshen College which is still to come.

Q: What do you hope your presidency is remembered for?

A: For me, in its simplest version, if there is a student for whom Goshen College was an impossible dream for whatever reason, and she or he entered with hesitation or fear, but graduated full of confidence ready to take on the world for the better, I would be honored to be remembered as a president for whom making that dream come true for that student was my greatest passion.

Q: What advice would you give to your successor?

A: As my former executive assistant and friend, Betty Schrag, said to me when I first started, 'Remember you are running a marathon, not a sprint.' I would add, in the spirit of former president J. Lawrence Burkholder '39, don't strive to be perfect; flawed and very good is good enough. Above all, hang with students, who will inevitably remind you of your highest calling as president and be the source of your greatest joy.

Q: What do you plan to do on your last day in office as president?

A: I'll probably be boxing-up books and other wonderful gifts given to me along the way, including the key to the city, the prayer shawl from my pastor, the purple bucket to collect tears from a friend, the ceramic wall art by former student Isaac Shue '10 and a painted icon of Martin Luther King, Jr. I'll probably also sit back and soak in the beauty of my sanctuary-like office and, perhaps, write one last note of thanks or sign one last stack of admissions certificates. At the end of the day, I'll look back one last time, turn out the lights, shut the door and head off into the future overwhelmed with gratitude.

BUSINESS

Forging Their Futures

EDITED BY
BRIAN YODER SCHLABACH '07

Young GC alumni and entrepreneurs are innovating, taking risks and building their own businesses from the ground up.

Armed with a great idea, an entrepreneurial spirit and a liberal arts education, our young alumni are finding ways to make a living doing what they love. Some studied business or earned one of GC's entrepreneurship grants right out of college. Others crowdsourced startup capital or started small and grew their business. But no matter how these creative professionals got started or what they studied, they all have a few things in common — strong critical thinking skills, a global perspective, a desire to serve and real-world experience based in a Goshen College education.

From technology to photography, handmade furniture to homegrown flowers, these alumni are not just running their own businesses, they're improving the world and impacting lives, all while adding their own personal touch to their products or services.

Meet a few of these builders, innovators and risk-takers.

Note: Alumni owned business window stickers, featured at left, are available for any alumni who own their own business and would like one to feature in their business window by emailing alumni@goshen.edu and requesting one.

How did your GC experience help you in your business?

"I had a lot of great entrepreneurial experiences at GC... I just didn't always recognize it at the time. I helped start a Film Club and held a variety of campus jobs in the IT department. I learned HTML with Paul Meyer Reimer '83 and Marvin Bartel."

What advice would you have for GC graduates?

"My recommendation is to go for it! Starting a business in college or just after graduation is an incredible life experience. It's also great to do it with your friends!"

Goosebump moments

The best part of working at Goshen College is that we get paid to work with amazing college students. This academic year, I've had multiple opportunities that have made me so glad to be an administrator at a small college where I can have deep and meaningful interactions with students.

I have the joy of working with Parables, our traveling worship ensemble. I have now heard their program more than 20 times as they have performed in local churches and organizations, as well as ones farther away. I know most of the lyrics to their songs by heart and know exactly when they forget a line in their personal testimonies, but I do not tire of spending time with them. In fact, I'm a bit protective of it and really take every chance I can get to travel with them to their programs. Their performances never fail to move their audiences and I feel I'm in sacred space to be able to work with them.

I also had the privilege to travel to Ontario with our 45-member Women's World Music Choir. Professor of Music Dr. Debra Detwiler Brubaker '79, the choir director, and I spent around eight months planning this tour. The students are amazing talents and wonderful ambassadors for the college. They had a great time as a group and they were so warmly welcomed everywhere we went. Our Canadian hosts were phenomenal and so appreciative of the chance to have the students sing for them and stay in their homes. Perhaps the moment that most perfectly embodies how special this trip was was when two young audience members were spotted comparing goosebumps as the women performed "This Little Light of Mine."

My work continues to provide me with these goosebump moments too and I'd love to share them with you. It's especially meaningful when we get to share our amazing current students with our alumni and friends in their own communities. Please contact me if you'd like to consider hosting Parables or our touring choir in your community.

Annual Report available online

Goshen College's 2015-16 annual report is available for viewing online at goshen.edu/give under "News & Reports." It is one opportunity to reflect back on the past year and say a big "thank you" to each of the individuals, churches and organizations that supported the college's students and mission this past fiscal year. Every donation matters.

Student Aid Phonathon update

Thank you for taking calls, visiting with our students and fulfilling your pledges! So far we've received $142,479 in gifts and pledges from our fall and spring phonathons. Students are continuing to make calls, and we hope you will answer your phone and make a gift before June 30 (the end of our fiscal year) to help make college more affordable for our students. 1930-39

NOTE

A new memoir traces the development of former Goshen College President J. Lawrence Burkholder's '39 (below) thought as it intersected with the events of his life. Titled "Recollections of a Sectarian Realist: A Mennonite Life in the Twentieth Century" (2016, Institute of Mennonite Studies), the memoir is based on interviews that C. Arnold Snyder, professor emeritus of history at Conrad Grebel University College (Waterloo, Ontario), conducted with Burkholder in 2005. Burkholder and daughter Myrna Burkholder '63 worked on editing the transcripts until he became too ill to focus on the project. Several years after he passed away at age 92 in 2010, Myrna returned to the project and finished editing the volume.

The memoir draws on Burkholder's Mennonite upbringing in a small Pennsylvania town and his experiences of pastoring in upstate New York; doing relief work in India and China; pursuing graduate studies at Princeton (N.J.) Theological Seminary; teaching at Goshen College and Harvard Divinity School in Cambridge, Massachusetts; engaging in civil rights activism; and serving as Goshen College president (1971-84).

Marion G. Bontrager '59, John E. Sharp '76 and Michele Schrock Hershberger '83, all current and former Hesston (Kan.) College Bible faculty, authored a book, "The Bible as Story: An Introduction to Biblical Literature" (Workplay Publishing, 2016). It is the new textbook for Hesston's required Bib Lit class. The book's approach to teaching the Bible is unique when compared to many other Bible classes, and consists of three parts: story, method (inductive study) and hermeneutics (interpretation). It reveals the Bible as a narrative of God and the people of God instead of a compilation of stories. 2

Harry Graber '54, West Liberty, Ohio, longtime Logan County cardiologist, began his recent retirement with the writing and publishing of a book, "The Making of a Physician – This Was My Calling" (Xlibris, June 2016), a reflection on his life and career in hopes that the book might be of assistance to young people considering the medical profession. 3

Seven-decade medical career touched many lives

When Robert "Doc" Abel '45 (above) passed away on Jan. 13 at the age of 92, it was less than a month after he had stopped working as a family doctor in Wakarusa, Indiana.

Abel worked up until Dec. 27, two days before he went to the hospital. During his seven-decade long medical career, he started the Wakarusa Medical Clinic and opened the WaNee Medical Walk In Clinic. His life was dedicated to medicine and the people of Elkhart County. Over his 75 plus years as a family doctor, he delivered more than 10,600 babies.

"He worked all the time," Keri Bemiller, a registered nurse who had worked with Abel, told The Elkhart Truth. "He was a natural inspiration. He'd be so patient and kind in however he'd care for someone, and he never wanted to turn anyone away."

In addition to medicine, Abel was very involved in his community, through church, 4-H and the WaNee school system.

60+ comforters for 60 years

To celebrate turning 60 on Oct. 18, Karen Kreider Yoder '78 (above) decided to make and donate 60 comforters to Mennonite Central Committee (MCC).

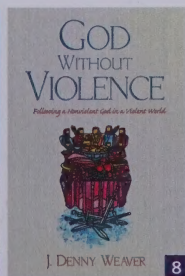

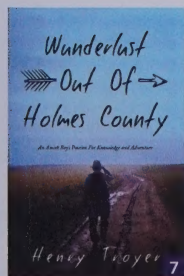

It originally started as one comforter for each decade of her life, but once she started putting the comforters together on June 10, she found it wasn't as time consuming as she thought it might be. So she decided to take on a bigger challenge: one comforter for each year.

Word of Yoder's project spread through Facebook and friends and family offered to donate supplies or money. Some even sent her comforter tops they had made. Members from her congregation, First Mennonite Church of San Francisco, also joined in by tying some of the comforters.

On Oct. 18, Yoder actually delivered 65 comforters to the West Coast MCC resource center in Reedley, California. She then attached a note of encouragement to each comforter for whoever would receive it.

"I wanted to do something that wasn't just for me," Yoder told Mennonite World Review. "I wanted to do something that was a peacemaking, community-building act."

Alums team up to create 'Potty Duck'

Fred Longenecker '87 and Shelly Mann '85 have teamed up to help make potty training easier for kids (and parents) by creating and marketing the Potty Duck.

Longenecker, an inventor from South Bend, Indiana, and Mann, a pediatrician from Grayslake, Illinois, are using this toy as a way for children to visually learn how to use the toilet, by having children fill the duck with water and squirt the water into the toy toilet. There's even a button on the top to "flush."

Longenecker got the idea for the toy when his now college-aged daughter was two years old, and he knew that Mann would be a good person to partner with because she's a pediatrician, specializing in potty training.

They began selling the duck over a year ago, and are pretty happy with the results so far. Mann has even given the toy out to parents, who have given her good feedback.

"We're very happy with the product," Longenecker told the Lake County Journal. "The children are more engaged than I expected from the reports I'm hearing."

Liz Martin '07 to help shape Indiana education policy

Liz Martin '07 (above), a master teacher at Goshen Middle School, was recently named as a fellow in the inaugural Indiana Teaching Policy Fellowship.

Martin will be part of a group of 19 other people that is working to connect the lawmakers of the state and school teachers over the course of the next year, in an effort to make policies that will be best for students across the state.

For Martin, this fellowship will be a good learning opportunity for her and the other teachers, but also for the lawmakers involved.

"Lawmakers are experts at writing policy. Teachers are experts in the class," Martin told The Elkhart Truth. "Really, this brings the two together so that we can share our knowledge and our perspectives."

The fellows have met with Jennifer McCormick, state superintendent of education, and Robert Behning, chairman of the House's Education Committee. One of the items discussed so far has been a teacher mentorship program.

Martin is hoping that she can use the stories of teachers at Goshen Middle School in her conversations with lawmakers to create effective policy.

Zehrs named Farm Family of the Year

Curt Zehr '81 (above center) and his family (including children Beth Reeser '00, Angie Short '01 and Michael Zehr '13) were named the 2017 Illinois Pork Producers Association Farm Family of the Year.

Zehr's maternal great-grandparents originally started the farm over 100 years ago, in Washington, Illinois. His father's family had raised hogs, and when his parents were married in 1958, his father joined the farm.

Since then, Zehr Farms has expanded into a few different businesses: Zehr Farms Premium Pork and Zehr Farms Genetics, as well as crops such as corn, soybeans and Duroc hogs. They also sell genetics from two boars.

Zehr is currently serving as the director of the Illinois Pork Producers Association, and he has one year left in that position. He also served as the president of the association in 2015.

"I've always been a part of pork producers, and it's always been an organization I believed in," he told AgriNews. "I've made a lot of really good friends and that's what I will take away from being on the board, all of those friendships I've made with people I otherwise might not have met."

Christina Hofer '16 began a one-year term of Mennonite Voluntary Service in August 2016 as a community garden assistant with Kansas City (Kan.) Community Gardens.

Tae Hwang '16 is a DDS candidate at the University of Michigan School of Dentistry.

Michael Oyer '16 is a men's resident director at Hesston (Kan.) College.

Christian Stevens '16 was named head varsity boys basketball coach at New Mexico Military Institute, Roswell, N.M.

NOTE

Dalton Shetter '17, East Lansing, Mich., works on the basketball broadcasting team at Michigan State University.

Joe Manickam '91 named Hesston College President

As of July 1, 2017, Joseph Manickam '91 will become the ninth president of Hesston (Kansas) College, a two-year sister Mennonite college.

He is currently serving as the director of the Institute of Religion, Culture and Peace and faculty member for peace students at Payap University in Chiang Mai, Thailand. Before that, he served three years with Mennonite Central Committee Canada as director of the Central-Southern and Northeast Asia Program in Thailand.

A 1987 graduate of Hesston College, Manickam will be returning to his first alma mater 30 years later, but to him, the core values have not changed.

"Hesston College has evolved during these past 30 years while remaining true to its core values — values that strive to shape students, staff and faculty into fluent translators of Christ's love," Manickam said. "It is for this reason that I am excited about my return to Hesston College."

In Memoriam

Professor Emeritus of Nursing Norma Jean Weldy (1929-2017)

Professor emeritus of nursing Norma Jean Weldy '54, died Tuesday, Jan. 10, 2017, at the age of 87. She had worked at the college for 33 years until her retirement in 1995. She was the author of a nursing textbook titled "Body Fluids and Electrolytes: A Programmed Presentation" in 1972, now in its eighth printing.

Professor Emeritus of History James (Jim) R. Hertzler (1934-2016)

Professor Emeritus of History James (Jim) R. Hertzler '61 died Nov. 18, 2016 at his Goshen home after an extended illness at the age of 82. He taught at Goshen College for 33 years, from 1966 until retiring in 1999. A scholar of British history, he was especially interested in architecture and sermons by 18th-century clergymen. He later on developed a passion for the history of Africa. He pioneered a course called First/Third World History that was built around the concept of globalization, a forward thinking course at the time.

In 1957, he married Alta Grace Martin '62, who died in 1982. He married Diane Schrock in 1984, and is survived by her, along with four children, Jennifer '11 and Melanie '15, both of Goshen, Philip '85 (Jessica Lapp '86) of Mount Pleasant, Michigan, and Randal '90 (Lisa) of North Potomac, Maryland; and four grandchildren.

Former Assistant Professor of Economics and Business Randal (Randy) G. Gunden (1952-2017)

Randy Gunden '75, a former business professor and administrator at Goshen College, died Feb. 25, 2017 in Fort Myers, Florida, after a 10-month battle with pancreatic cancer at the age of 64. He taught economics and business courses at the college from 1984-02. He returned to Goshen College as the executive director of adult and online programs from 2011-13. Gunden is survived by his wife, Deborah Lederach Gunden '80; his son, Matthew (Laura) of Chicago, Illinois; and son Jacob of Seattle, Washington.

Trying to make better farmers

BY JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

A decade after establishing a campus at Goshen, faculty were looking for places to expand facility and program. Encouraged by external voices, biology professor Christian B. Blosser 1907 helped push for a school of agriculture. Given the longstanding reputation of skilled Mennonite farmers, some asked “Why?” Blosser’s response: “But their sons must be better farmers.”

A new Science Hall, finished in 1916 after considerable financial difficulty, had its ground floor dedicated to agricultural training. Short-term courses, a full bachelor’s of science program and tie-ins to home economics were all part of the plan President John E. Hartzler 1910 and Blosser promoted with glowing descriptions and capital investment.

In 1909, the college had purchased a farm west of the Elkhart River reservoir to support scholarships and provision the cafeteria. In 1914, that was sold in favor of a more conveniently located farm east of campus. The somewhat dilapidated place soon boasted 8 cows, 5 calves and 75 chickens, with clover and alfalfa fields sown. Hartzler raised a stately dairy barn there and made other improvements. Seeking to assure a credible program, Blosser pursued a master’s degree in agriculture at Wisconsin.

To many, the idea of a Mennonite school teaching agriculture seemed an obvious fit. But, in fact, the program unfortunately never flourished during those early years. Enrollment peaked in 1917-18 at 10 students and the sole recipient of a bachelor’s of science degree in agriculture was Harry F. Weber 1921, who went on for a doctorate and a career of teaching sociology and higher education administration.

Today though, Goshen College operates the Merry Lea Sustainable Farm and offers a sustainable food systems major and the Agroecology Summer Intensive.

A close-up photograph of a garden scene. A white showerhead is positioned at the top, spraying a stream of water onto a vibrant red tulip flower. The tulip is surrounded by lush green foliage, including long, slender leaves and other plants. The background is softly blurred, showing more greenery and a hint of a building. The overall mood is nurturing and hopeful.

Help dreams grow

Tuition only covers 2/3 of the actual cost of a transformative Goshen College education for students with big dreams and plans to make a difference in the world. By contributing to the Goshen College Fund, you can help students' dreams take root and flourish.
